

MILDRED J. SNIDER SCHOLARSHIP

The School of Social Work is accepting self-nominations for The Mildred J. Snider Scholarship. This $1,000 scholarship is given annually to a social work graduate student interested in social policy studies. The graduate student must demonstrate a strong potential for advancement of social policies related to community development and social service integration. The recipient will engage in policy studies that involve the systematic analysis of the mix of government and non-government policy and program development in social welfare at federal, state, and local levels.

The scholarship is to be used to assist in funding a graduate student for an internship in policy studies in an approved national public or private agency or to support policy related research. The scholarship can help to cover the cost of tuition, the purchase of books and informational materials, related research costs, and/or transportation.

The criteria for selecting the recipient of the scholarship is based on career aspirations in policy development and research, and scholastic potential.
